Join us for the Second Annual
ART FAIR KMA
September 25-27, 2015
As we head into summer 2015 I want to pause momentarily to reflect on an exceptionally active and eventful twelve months at the KMA. It was barely a year ago that we celebrated the much-anticipated unveiling of Richard Jolley’s Cycle of Life and the completion of the comprehensive restoration, preservation, and improvement of the KMA’s landmark facility. The Clayton Building first opened to the public on March 25, 1990. We gathered on March 25, 2015 to commemorate a successful run of twenty-five years. That joyous occasion also marked the official conclusion of the 25th Anniversary Campaign, which raised approximately $12 million (including estate commitments and the value of the Jolley installation) to fund building renovations, establish a dedicated art acquisition fund, and add to operating and program endowments. What a memorable year!

We’ve all been reminded in the course of observing this milestone anniversary of the seemingly superhuman effort and determination required to build the Clayton Building and the vision, courage, and commitment of those who made it happen, against all odds. We also celebrate the no less important achievement of supporting and sustaining the institution that was so grandly installed on World’s Fair Park. So many donors and volunteers gave so much over the years to nurture the fledgling KMA, and it is hard to express adequately the depth of our gratitude. As the museum evolved, its collecting and programming focus eventually settled on the visual culture, old and new, of the Southern Appalachians. The museum’s permanent exhibitions, Higher Ground: A Century of the Visual Arts in East Tennessee and Currents: Recent Art from East Tennessee and Beyond, foster an appreciation of the rich visual culture of our region within a global context. A third permanent exhibition, devoted to the museum’s growing holdings in modern and contemporary glass, showcases a growing and increasingly rich area of the collection. These permanent exhibitions are complemented and supplemented by a lively schedule of temporary exhibitions that explore additional aspects of East Tennessee’s regional artistic legacy, international contemporary art, and how the region connects to the wider world.

One Plane Vertical/Diagonal

The KMA begins its second quarter century in sound financial condition, with a beautifully renovated facility, a powerful sense of identity, and deep roots in the community. The KMA’s Cycle of Life has come to represent kinetic sculptor George Rickey’s pioneering work within a global context. A third permanent exhibition, devoted to the museum’s growing holdings in modern and contemporary glass, showcases a growing and increasingly rich area of the collection. These permanent exhibitions are complemented and supplemented by a lively schedule of temporary exhibitions that explore additional aspects of East Tennessee’s regional artistic legacy, international contemporary art, and how the region connects to the wider world.

The KMA's Cycle of Life exhibition is a 1971 gift from long-time KMA patrons and noted contemporary art collectors June and Rob Heller. Since the 1980s, the Knoxville couple has built a diverse collection of contemporary art and international studio glass. Earlier in the year, the Hellers donated a glass totem by Richard Jolley entitled Perception versus Reality, gave funds to build additional cases for the KMA’s ongoing glass sculpture exhibition Facets, and then decided to part with three of the most significant works in their collection: Shards II by Frank Stella, Green Picture in My Meadow by Jim Dine, and One Plane Vertical/Diagonal by George Rickey. Shards II stems from Stella’s “Circuits” series of the 1980s, in which he assembled and painted salvaged metal scraps left over from earlier art projects to create a groundbreaking synthesis of painting and sculpture. Stella is an avid auto racing enthusiast, and the curving strips in Circuits series works such as Shards II are inspired by the shape of Formula One and NASCAR race tracks.

Dine is internationally known for his paintings and works on paper in which he enlarges a single image from his familiar environment—boots, tools, clothing—and, as in Green Picture in My Meadow, a stylized human heart. He chose to mix straw with his paint in order to give the painting a sculptural surface, and to make reference to the southern Vermont landscape that inspired him. One Plane Vertical/Diagonal represents kinetic sculptor George Rickey’s pioneering work with geometric forms in motion. This interest stemmed from his early experiments with wire and metal while servicing instruments used in B-29 bombers as an Army Air Corps engineer during World War II. Instead of relying on motorized power, Rickey found greater satisfaction in allowing natural forces—especially unpredictable air currents and gravity—to dictate patterns of movement in his mechanically precise steel forms.

The Hellers’ gift represents one of the most significant in the history of the KMA, and the museum is extremely grateful for their extraordinary support of the KMA and its collection.
Intellectual Property Donor is the first major U.S. one-person presentation of Evan Roth’s pioneering multi-faceted and interactive installations, custom software, prints, sculptures and websites. Roth, a self-professed “hacktivist” artist, is interested in uses of technology in popular culture and the urban environment. He inventively combines elements from the disparate worlds of computer programming and street culture. Ultimately, his work is about whether a graffiti artist adds a tag to an existing public arena, or a hacker finds a loophole in a website that alters the performance of the site, or an artist initiates a dialogue with the public that suggests tweaking established systems or encouraging us to revisit the status quo. Evan Roth/Intellectual Property Donor offers a unique opportunity to understand the artist’s approach from analysis and archiving to experimentation through to the final—and in the artist’s mind—most important step, opening it up to the world for participation. Blurring the line between artist and hacker, the exhibition challenges gallery visitors to consider how everyday life intersects with virtual reality and how viral media can become fine art.

Evan Roth/Intellectual Property Donor will feature recent works from 2008 to 2014, many made specifically for the exhibition and not exhibited before:

Graffiti Analysis, a projection of custom software and algorithmically produced sculptures that visualize motion tracked graffiti data.

Graffiti Analysis: Sculptures, three in ABS Thermoplastic and one in bronze, three-dimensional physical analogs to the surreptitious gesture of the graffiti writer.

Ideas Worth Spreading, an interactive installation that invites visitors to create their own pirate TED talks.

A Tribute to Heather, ten web-based visual motion studies using found animated gif files that are viewed on gallery visitors’ own computing devices (smartphones, tablets or laptops).

Internet Cache Portrait, a variety of mixed-media sculptures that perform tasks as a result of the pressure from spray paint, accompanied by a video of the objects in motion. (above)

Internet Cache Self Portrait, a printed portrait consisting of all the images viewed on the Internet by the artist during the course of a day, or week, or month. (upper left)

Cache Silhouette, a fresh take on the traditions of portraiture and silhouette-cutting where the sitter is defined by her online interactions rather than facial features. Slide to Unlock, a wall-scaled print created by performing an everyday routine task on a multi-touch hand-held computing devices. (lower left)

Level Cleared, a series of 1,540 smartphone screen-sized ink prints of the gestures required to beat the 300 levels of the popular game “Angry Birds.”

Evan Roth is an American artist based in Paris. His notable works include Graffiti Taxonomy, Multi Touch, EyeWriter, Internet Cache Portraits and a collaboration with Jay-Z on the first open source rap video. Roth worked at the Eyebeam OpenLab, an open source creative technology lab for the public domain as a Research and Development Fellow from 2005 to 2006 and was a Senior Fellow there from 2006 to 2007. Evan Roth co-founded the Graffiti Research Lab in 2005 and the Free Art and Technology Lab (FAT Lab), an arts and free culture collective, in 2007. Born in 1978 in Okemos, Michigan, Roth currently lives in Paris with his wife and daughter where he maintains a studio and is represented by XPO Gallery.

Evan Roth/Intellectual Property Donor is organized by the Ezra and Cecile Zilkha Gallery, Center for the Arts, Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut and is curated by Ginger Duggan, Judith Hoos Fox of curatorsquared.
The KMA would like to thank its great volunteers. Their commitment to the KMA is exceptional! If you would like more information about becoming a volunteer, please contact DeLena Feliciano at dfeliciano@knoxart.org.

A Sneak Peek at Upcoming Exhibitions

F. Scott Hess: The Paternal Suit
August 21-November 8, 2015

The Paternal Suit consists of over 100 paintings, prints, and objects created by Los Angeles-based conceptual artist F. Scott Hess, presented as legitimate historical artifacts, and supported by photographs, documents, and historical ephemera.

The Knoxville 7
January 29-April 17, 2016

This exhibition examines an influential group of progressive artists in Knoxville who energized East Tennessee’s art scene between 1955 and 1965. The group included C. Kermit “Buck” Ewing, Carl Sublett, Walter Stevens, Robert Birdwell, Joanna Higgs Ross, Richard Clarke, and Philip Nichols. Each maintained an individual style and utilized varying degrees of abstraction. Together, they produced what are likely the first abstract works of art in Tennessee and helped establish a foothold for modern art in the region.

FAMILY FUN DAY
Celebrate “Back to School” with the KMA

Saturday, August 22 11am-3pm

The Knoxville Museum of Art invites children and parents to celebrate a “Back to School” Family Fun Day on Saturday, August 22 from 11am to 3pm. All events at Family Fun Day are FREE and open to the public.

Children of all ages have the opportunity to create art at one of the many art-making stations inspired by current exhibitions and a “back to school” theme. Parents and kids can tap their feet to the music, participate in gallery talks given by a docent guide, and get their face painted.

Refreshments will be for sale.

The Knoxville Museum of Art recently hosted the 17th annual James L. Clayton Award luncheon to honor June and Rob Heller for their long-time support of the KMA and its collecting activities, particularly in the field of contemporary art. Jim Clayton presented the award to the Hellers in the Ann and Steve Bailey Hall under Richard Jolley’s magnificent glass and steel installation, Cycle of Life, noting their generous support of the KMA for more than two decades.

The James L. Clayton Award was established in 1998 to recognize the unique contributions Jim Clayton has made to the Knoxville Museum of Art over the history of the museum. The Clayton Award is presented annually to the individual, family, foundation, or business whose support has been both uncommonly generous and sustained. This prestigious event is sponsored by The Lamp Foundation, Schaad Companies, The Trust Company, and All Occasion Catering.

The Knoxville Museum of Art is pleased to have UBS as a partner. UBS was a major sponsor of the unveiling celebration of Richard Jolley’s permanent installation Cycle of Life: Within the Power of Dreams and the Wonder of Infinity, one of the largest figurative glass-and-steel assemblages in the world. UBS’s five year, $50,000 commitment to the KMA is just one example of its longstanding and multifaceted partnerships in Knoxville. UBS is engaged in education initiatives throughout the community, and plans to exhibit local artists and host lectures in its new offices at First Tennessee Plaza. The firm is also a major sponsor of the KMA’s 25th Anniversary gala, Celebrating Silver Going for Gold, in May.

In the KMA, UBS found a strategic partner to build upon its broader international engagement in the arts. UBS is now the global Lead Partner of Art Basel, across all three shows in Basel, Miami Beach and Hong Kong. The firm is also an active sponsor of contemporary art initiatives such as the Guggenheim UBS MAP project, a global collaboration with the Solomon R. Guggenheim Foundation that engages with artists, institutions and the public in three major regions of the world. Through the UBS Arts Forum, UBS hosts a series of discussions, lectures and workshops, serving as a source of trusted information and insights for its clients. At the heart of UBS’s global support of contemporary art is its own collection. Incorporating more than 30,000 pieces and including thousands of contemporary works by artists ranging from emerging talents to some of the most important artists of the last 50 years, UBS’s collection is one of the largest and most important in the world.

Thanks to the experience, knowledge and support of UBS, KMA looks forward to welcoming new visitors, fostering discussion and generating innovative ideas that will benefit the Knoxville community for years to come.
